Human Solidarity in a Globalized Knowledge Society: Philosophical Perspectives

The technological civilization in which we live has prompted the need for creating a pluralistic civil society in a global context. Pluralism is a normative concept that entails not only allowing 'diversity' to surface in various contexts but also calls for an exploration of the idea of 'human solidarity'.

This seminar will focus on diverse philosophical perspectives regarding the idea of human solidarity as a notion that seeks to avoid 'homogenization' while contesting at the same time view of a 'radical incommensurability'.
